To whom it may concern:

I am writing to recommend Jennifer Eatough for the Game Writer position currently advertised on your website. I have known Jennifer for approximately ten years through her work as a convention manager and in the field of professional writing.

As lead convention staff, Jennifer is responsible for managing a team of staff and volunteers, coordinating event, author and guest logistics, managing marketing and social media presence, developing and maintaining the convention's web presence, and ensuring that the convention runs smoothly on a day to day basis. Jennifer is an adept and upbeat team leader. She has repeatedly demonstrated diplomacy, discretion and grace under pressure.

Jennifer is also a highly skilled writer. Her academic writing is clear, well-researched and professional. Jennifer is also an accomplished fiction writer, too. Her fiction is richly-detailed, logically plotted and written in the kind of tone and voice that engages readers and leaves them spell-bound. She has reliably placed in the top one percent of entries in the world's largest science fiction and fantasy short story contest, and I fully expect she will win it with one of her future entries. She excels at character creation, world-building, plot development, description, and scene structure.

Jennifer holds a Master of Library Science degree. She can not only write compelling quest, lore and story text, but she also has the training to understand how to categorize, connect, and archive such data, and design systems that make it accessible to designers and players alike.

Jenna's repertoire of writing ability, communication and team-management skills, and her advanced degree in Library Science make her uniquely qualified for this position. If I can answer questions or be of assistance in any way, please do not hesitate to contact me.

Sincerely,
